Lifting Operations and Lifting Equipment Regulations (LOLER) weight testing

Safe and successful lifting operations largely depend on the continued safety of the lifting equipment and accessories that are being used.

All lifting equipment, including tail lifts, must be thoroughly examined in accordance with the latest LOLER guidelines, which are designed to ensure all lifting equipment is:

1. Fit for purpose
2. Appropriately maintained
3. Marked in order to minimise risk

Failure to comply with the LOLER guidelines can result in significant or even fatal injuries occurring.

Our team of experienced engineers can help ensure your tail lifts and accessories comply with the latest guidelines by:

- Regularly conducting thorough tail lift inspections in line with the latest stipulations
- Providing weight testing checks and services
- Carrying out winch testing
